A Spaceship Built Of Stone

A Spaceship Built of Stone and Other Stories, by Lisa Tuttle has taken me a while to finish as I have enjoyed dipping in and out of it. I think she's one of the BEST short story writers, and not just in the SFY genre. Her stories really make me think and they often have a strong emotional impact.

A Spaceship Built of Stone provides both intelligence and the sort of relief we can only expect from short stories in this age of massive novels and trilogies which, like meat, are sold by the pound. Tuttle's stories are restrained, measured, and without fuss, and when they work, as they do in 'Birds of the Moon' and 'Wives,' they allow us time to think for ourselves...

Though the title might suggest otherwise, ‘The Bone Flute’ is one of only a few stories in A Spaceship Built of Stone which inhabits genre heartland. It is set in a sketchily-described interstellar civilisation, and involves a trip to a world that has been cut off from the mainstream of humanity for several centuries.
